

"We were audited by WorkCover NSW just after we implemented drug and alcohol testing and were commended on our approach and the quality of documentation provided by the Onsite Drug Testing service".

Barry Moss, Moss Contracting.

CASE STUDY

Reduced Workplace Accidents

Our client had a high incidence of heavy vehicle accidents in their fleet. After implementing regular testing we were able to significantly reduce the number of accidents caused by their drivers within 6 months. They still conduct regular testing and have managed to reduce their insurance costs and premiums.

Our qualifications:

Our testing staff are all Nationally Certified drug screening officers under the recent Australian Standards AS/NZS4308:2008 & AS4760:2006. They have completed a comprehensive pathology training course in the exact procedure to follow under the Australian Standards. Therefore you can be assured that if any of your employees legally challenge the results, our procedure will not be questioned.

The laboratory we use is NATA certified to the latest testing protocols so you can be assured of quality confirmatory testing.

How long does it take to perform the testing?

The Onsite brand of drug testing products utilise quick wicking technology which means we get the results rapidly on-the-spot. The testing times below include completion of all paperwork and performing the drug & alcohol screening test.

Onsite oral testing takes an average of 7.5 minutes per person

Onsite urine testing takes an average of 10 minutes per person

Alcohol breathalyser testing takes an additional 1 minute!

How often should we perform testing on our staff?

The aim of drug and alcohol screening in a workplace is to minimise/eliminate the presence of drugs and alcohol in the work environment. We recommend testing 25-50% of all staff in the initial 3-6 months. You will then be able to gauge the level of drug and alcohol use present in the workplace and work out a testing regime to suit.

The aim is to eventually eliminate drug and alcohol use and provide a safe, drug & alcohol free working environment for all employees.
